Lemon Grove School Children Offered Free Dental Check Up

Local Dentists Co-Operate on Dental Week

Next Monday, children under 15 years of age in the Lemon Grove area will be given an opportunity to have free dental examination. Hours for the examination will be from 9 to 12 noon, and from 2 until 5 p.m.

Drs. Peter E. Shea and Donald G. Johnson, local dentists, have visited the schools, lecturing and showing pictures on the care of teeth. They stressed the fact that there are over two million decayed teeth in the school age children and that bad chewing habits are formed from the bad teeth.

They recommend cutting down on sugar and increasing the wholesome type of food such as milk, butter, fruit and cheese.

Owing to the large number of children who will probably avail themselves of this opportunity, it will be impossible for the doctors to consult with parents at the time of examination. No appointments can be made, as all inspections will be on a "first come, first served" basis. Parents are requested to take their children to either of the two dentists outside of school hours.

There is no obligation of any type involved in this free dental examination.

The week of February 5 through February 11 is National Dental Health Week.

Board Rejects Plea of Skyline People

Residents along Skyline drive from Canton to Lansing recently petitioned the San Diego County Planning Commission to grant to each property owner 20 feet of the street, because Skyline drive is only a 50 foot street to the north and south of them.

The Commission rejected the petition because Skyline drive is in the overall planning as an arterial highway to connect with Broadway via Kempf street to the north and with National avenue at its southerly terminus.

However, the residents of the 1600 block on Skyline drive are quite put out by the action of the commission, having no concrete evidence that the street will be made a 100 foot boulevard in the near future.

Young Mother Passes Away

This community was shocked and grieved on Tuesday morning when word was received of the passing of Mrs. M. E. Day, 2135 Washington street, in the Navy Hospital. Few of Mrs. Day's friends knew that she was critically ill with cancer.

Mrs. Day was intensely interested in Scouting and other projects for the welfare of children. Last year she served as chairman of the Neighborhood Club (Girl Scouters) and was a leader of a troop as long as health permitted.

Vera Catherine Reeder was born on July 29, 1917 in Ohio. She came to California 12 years ago and lived in various Navy stations, her husband, Milton E. Day being in service in the Navy. They came to Lemon Grove about two years ago, where the family has made a host of friends.

Besides her husband she leaves a daughter, Katherine Colleen 12, and Richard Eugene, 10; her mother, Mrs Genevieve Fitch of Belleview, O., and a brother, William Reeder ,U.S.N.

Fire District Gets Insurance Rate Cut

While the proponents of fire protection in Lemon Grove can not guarantee a reduction in insurance rates, they can take satisfaction on what has happened in other parts of the state where fire protection districts have been formed.

Here is an exeample in San Gabriel Valley, Los Angeles county, where a fire protection district was formed several years ago embracing practically all of the county area of the western half of the valley, including five unincorporated cities.

The fire insurance rate for a single residence with a composition roof is 57½c per $100, while just across the road outside of the district the rate is 85c per $100 of insurance.

In the incorporated city of Glendora the rate is 52½c per $100, and outside the city limits with no fire protection, the rate is 90c.

The San Gabriel Valley Fire Protection District is not so well off as to water mains and water facilities as is the proposed Lemon Grove Fire Protection District, but the district is served by five pumper trucks with capacities varying from 300 to 500 gallons each, all stationed at strategic points throughout the district.

This merely shows what can and should happen in Lemon Grove in the event that the district is established here.

PTA Thrift Shop Needs Supplies

Mrs. Mangels says there is a need for good, clean clothing and shoes for boys and girls. Toys are also wanted. There is a nice supply of baby clothes on hand.

The plot of land upon which the new high school is to be located on University avenue, will be included in the La Mesa, Spring Valley and Lemon Grove Irrigation District if the voters approve at a special election to be held throughout the district tommorrow (Friday).

Three other parcels of land are also involved in the election, one in the La Mesa-Spring Valley elementary school district, and a proposed high school site in El Cajon Valley and a portion of the Grossmont site which lies just outside the water district.

To qualify for state money in construction of new schools, the sites must be located in areas served with water mains. The inclusion of these parcels in the water district has been worked out on terms acceptable to the directors of the irrigation district.

Dolan Stecher, 4003 Paula St., was happily surprised on his birthday anniversary last Thursday evening when his wife entertained in his honor. Mr. Stecher is a member of the Rancho Mission quartette, and the other members being present, several numbers by the quartette were enjoyed. Kiwanians Hear Club's History

Dr. W. B. Oster, Pacific Beach Kiwanian, gave a talk on the history of Kiwanis International at the Lemon Grove Kiwanis Club Monday noon.

Gene DeValle, interlocutor of the La Mesa minstrel show which is to be presented Febduary 9, 10 and 11 in Grossmont auditorium, appeared on the stage at the Rancho Mission auditorium and gave the Kiwanians a sample of what they might expect at the show.

The minstrel is being presented by members of the La Mesa Kiwanis, all amateurs, but from what we can learn, some of them are pretty much on the professional side and could make a living on the stage, if vaudeville ever came back.

Tickets are a dollar and may be purchased in Lemon Grove from any local Kiwanian.

All horsemen of the county, particularly the officers of all riding clubs, are asked to meet next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the American Legion Hall in La Mesa, with the officers of the California State Horsemen's Association and the officials in charge of riding trails in the state and county, to thoroughly discuss the trail situation. This meeting is open to all horsemen and riders and anyone interested in the future planning of the vitally needed riding and hiking trails and is of paramount importance to everyone concerned in the equestrian field. If a sufficient number of local residents are interested in obtaining this free service they are asked to notify the Chamber of Commerce secretary, Mrs. Vaughn, before February 8 at H 6.3345, or send a post card to Box 96, Lemon Grove, or call at the Chamber of Commerce office at 3440 Main street, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., February 8. Reciprocity Day Happy Event for Forward Club

Reciprocity Day, the big event in the year when the club president wants to show off her club in its best 'bib and tucker," surely was a most happy and satisfying day for Mrs. Ted Haaf, president of the Forward Club.

Held on Friday afternoon about 80 guests were present. A vanda corsage was presented each distinguished guest—District chairman, County officers and presidents of Women's Clubs from Rolando, El Cajon, Alpine, La Cresta, Bostonia, Point Loma, La Mesa, University Heights, Lakeside and San Diego Civic.

The beautifully decorated club rooms gave evidence of the artistic ability of the Garden Section members.

Following a short business meeting conducted by Mrs. Haaf, guests were welcomed and a program provided by the Garden, Book Review and Drama Sections.

"A Cooky for Henry," by Delores Burk Hitchens, was delightfully presented by members of The Drama department under the direction of Mrs. Schuyler Read.

Four friends Ida, Anne, Ruth and Hazel cleverly played by Beverly Hentigan, Florence Kallanquin, Todd Ballentine and Mary Patterson were convinced that if their friend Mabel, (a difficult part well acted by Persis Mytiger) would spend more time on her personal appearance and less time in developing her house wifely talents she would speedily land her Henry. Their subsequent actions in creating her into a cooky for Henry's delight backfired and they were suddenly faced with an aroused Mabel, who by her dignity and truthfulness convinced them her way of life was the best. Aided and abetted by the girls older pal, well played by Mrs. Leslie Wright, who balanced both sides and convinced the frivolous ones who agreed to spend a little more on food and less on attire with the result of more contented husbands.

Mrs. Read is to be congratulated upon the selection of the play and the cast. This Drama group encourages membership from both Junior and Senior Forward Clubs.

Tea was served at a table centered with an enlarged replica of an old fashioned nosegay of violets centered with a single pink rose bud, complimented on either side by tall lighted pink tapers in silver holders. Mrs. Haaf and Mrs. David Hentigan, Junior president, poured and the hostesses were Mesdames John Newton, J. E. Sonka and Herbert Latter.

One of the most thoughtful commentaries on the President's legislative proposals was recently made by Walter Lipp.mann. He wrote: "Truman's technique is never to deal with problems, but with only excellent results that would be achieved if the problems had been solved . . . . leaving the critic no target to shoot at, no antagonist to get hold of, only the thin air to thrash around in." No one—including the President's most aggressive political opponents—is opposed to generalized goals as better housing, better health, a vastly increased family income, and happiness and prosperity on an almost sublime scale. In fact, these are goals toward which the nation has been making consistant and remarkable progress for generations. But what many people do object to is Mr. Truman's belief that the only way to attain these goals is to let the government do everything. As an example, it would certainly be splendid if everyone had the $12,000 a year income the President forecast for the future. But it wouldn't help much if the government took $10,000 of it in taxes. It is all very well to deal with wonderful objectives. But what about immediate problems?

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT

JAMES DORAIS

Like exploited children in a Victorian.era novel, who turned over their earnings to hard.hearted parents and received a fraction of it back for spending money, the 48 States have a similar arrangement with Uncle Sam. Of the more than forty billion dollaras collected by the Federal Government in 1948, five and one.half billions, or 12 percent., were returned to the States in grants-in.air.

There is this difference, however. All of Uncle Sam's children don't share alike.

California can't complain on this score, for this State's rebate was the same as the national average—12 percent. Whether it makes sense, of course, for Californians to pay 12 percent of their federal taxes for services that could probabley be performed cheaper on a local level is another matter.

The States that might complain if they had a mind to, are Delaware, which gets only 3 percent of its taxes back, New York, whose rebate is only 5½ percent., Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey and Ohio, all of which receive only 9 percent, or less.

The States that get a break are the traditionally poor States of the South. Heading the list is Mississippi. Ninety.six percent of all taxes that Mississipians pay Uncle Sam are sent right back by return mail.

Mississippi doubtless is quite content with this arrangement. To its credit, however, this poverty.stricken State—it has the lowest per capita income in the Nation—is currently engaged in a determined effort to improve its lot. Mississippi has a plan. It is called BAWI (Balanced Agriculture with Industry) and its purpose is to attract industry to the Magnolia State.

Under the unique BAWI law, municipalities may vote bonds to purchase plant sites and construct buildings for new industrial enterprises. For the first five years of operation, new plants are exempted from city and county property taxes. So far, a total of 46 plants have come to Mississippi under BAWI auspices, and industrial employment has increased by more than 50 percent.

The industrial States of the North, however, may wonder how much their own tax dollars are contributing to the success of their Southern competition. What portion of the tax savings Mississippi is able to offer new enterprises under the BAWI plan is made possible by the lavish subsidies poured into "poor" Mississippi by the Federal Government?

However much one's heart may bleed for the backward people of Mississippi, the conclusion is inescapable that Federal grants.in.aid exact an unfair penalty on the progressive States whose people have worked hard to provide for themselves good public schools, modern roads and adequate welfare services.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

Like the cast in preparation for the opening of grand opera, all the starring participants of California's coming political season are in a frenzy over last minute details. Some are diligently studying entry clues, and the sound of "mi, mi, mi, mi" drifts in from off stage. Most all have peeked out from some vantage point to smirk at the audience.

Behind the scenes, however, there are the "lesser lights"—those who must keep affairs of state running smoothly, although they, too, are dependent on public approval for continuance in office.

Four men in California fall into this category of "lesser lights." That each is thoroughly competent at his work can be demonstrated by the fact that all are practically assured of re.election.

Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan is known and admired throughout the Nation as an excellent public official and a man who gets things done with a minimum of fuss and bother. Jordan can point with pride to running "the only constitutional office which is self sustaining." His record of achievement includes the abolition of the separate presidential primary in California—at a saving of more than $2,000,000 a year for the taxpayers of the State.

State Controller Thomas H. "Tommy" Kuchel, the affable, youngish.looking auditor and guardian of public funds is another of the men who toil so efficiently for the State just beyond the glare of the spotlights. Kuchel has simplified and modernized the administration of his office. Of equal importance, he has successfully urged legislation to better and simplify State audit procedures and accounting practices.

As a result of Kuchel's modernization efforts, the payment of State bills has been speeded up and at the same time the procedure has been made more economic.

State Treasurer Charles, G. "Gus" Johnson, dean of all elective officers, in point of service, is next on the list. Johnson, the rugged, thoroughly honest and completely likeable seasoned veteran, easily can be pointed out as a rarity in public office. The staff of State Treasury, under Johnson's guidance and direction, has remained constant in size as far back as the memory stretches of the oldest capitol observers.

Last but not least of the "lesser lights" is Superintendent of Public Instruction, Dr. Roy E. Simpson. It is in Simpson's capable hands that California's public school system has been safely steered through the post.war period of fantastic growth. That the pubic schools have met the unprecedented challenge occasioned by that growth is due in no little part to Simpson's careful and competent direction.

But now, the political curtain rises.

Butterflies, Beetles, Cyanide Make a 'Surprise' Vengeance

By BILLY ROSE

When Martin Quint, 71, married Ellie Reynolds, 34, their friends in Nyack didn't give the union much chance of success. Five years later, however, they were ready to admit they had been wrong—Ellie was doing a good job of taking care of Martin and as for the old coot—well, he was a lot friendlier than anyone had ever thought possible.

On their fifth anniversary, Martin sent Ellie to New York on an errand, filled the parlor with gifts and paper curlicues, and invited a dozen neighbors in for a surprise party.

The plan was for a lookout at the railroad depot to phone when he saw Ellie get off the train, and then they would turn out the lights and hide. When Ellie walked in and turned them on again, everyone would yell, "Surprise!"

Billy Rose

Well, what happened was a surprise, all right, but there was no yelling. As the front door opened, Quint and his guests heard Ellie whisper, "Sssh! He might be awake."

"I don't like this sneaking around," said the voice of a man. "Why don't you ask him for a divorce?"

"Think I'm crazy? He doesn't figure to live much longer, and I'm pretty sure to get the savings and insurance. Thanks for taking me home. See you Tuesday at the regular time."

Then Ellie closed the door and switched on the lights . . . .

• • •

AFTER THE embarrassed guests had left, she said to her husband, "I suppose you want me to pack."

"Why should I?" said Martin. "It's only human nature for you to take up with someone nearer your own age."

"Don't you want a divorce?"

"Not unless you insist on it. All I ask is that you stop seeing the young man as long as I'm alive. If you'll agree and put it in writing, I'll fix it so you'll get every cent I've got."

And that's how it was arranged. An agreement was signed and locked in the wall safe, and the couple went on living together.

Of course, the neighbors gossiped a lot, particularly when it was whispered around that Ellie was still seeing the young man, but their talk seemed to make no impression on Martin. Instead, he busied himself with a new hobby—the study of insects—and spent most of his waking hours in a spare room over the garage, mounting butterflies and beetles on small exhibit boards.

"I wouldn't mention this around," he told his wife. "As it is, people think I'm not quite all there."

One evening, just after Ellie had brought him the usual glass of warm milk, Martin began to have convulsions. Ellie phoned the doctor that her husband was having a heart attack, but by the time he arrived the old man was dead. The doctor examined the body, then called the coroner, and an hour later the corpse, together with the empty milk glass, was taken away.

• • •

EARLY THE following morning a detective rang Ellie's doorbell.

"I have a warrant for your arrest," he said. "According to the coroner, your husband died of cyanide poisoning, and the drugstore in town reports that you bought a bottle of the stuff two weeks ago."

"That's right," said Ellie. "Martin used the cyanide to kill the insects he was studying. There are hundreds of specimens in the laboratory over the garage."

"I never heard of his being interested in bugs," said the detective. "Can I see this laboratory?"

Ellie led the way up the garage stairs and opened the door. There was nothing in the room but a few bits of junk and an old bicycle.

"I'm sorry, but you'll have to come along," said the detective. "You're the only person who figured to profit by Mr. Quint's death."

"I swear I didn't do it," said Ellie. "Both Martin and I knew he wouldn't live long, and we signed an agreement which explains everything. It's in his study."

She ran into the house, opened the wall safe and took out a brown envelope, but when she tore it open there was nothing inside but a piece of blank paper.

Blank, that is, except for one word pencilled in a childish scrawl—"Surprise!"

Talks and Walks With Mother Nature

LAZULI BUNTING

The Lazuli Bunting is one bird you cannot observe from your front porch or even perhaps in your city park. He is still as wild grapes, and as untamed as a bumblebee. In fact the Lazuli Bunting is a constant reminder to me that most of the beautiful things are still to be found far from man and his clattering pavements. This little animated turquoise does not care a fig about cultivated places. Like the bees, he loves primitive, unharmed landscapes, and there he seems as fresh and unspoiled as if he had just come from the hands of the Creator.

Come with me then to one of the haunts of the Lazuli Bunting. It is the middle of May in the coast region of California. Spring still lingers in the willow thickets of the river valleys. Willows and grapevines, brambles, nettles and blooming mustard make a fragrant jungle. It is a favorite resort of summer visitors—chats, vireos, grosbeaks and black.chinned hummingbirds. We wade the shallow river bank green with tall sweet clover and artemesia sprinkled with yellow mustard, a sunny edge of the jungle. Hardly have we arrived when close by we hear an alarm cry—"tsick, tsick, tsick." Soon we catch a glimse of a shy, brownish bird about as large as a sparrow flitting uneasily among the weeds. Then from the bending top of a young willow we hear a sprightly warble from the bluest, happiest throat in the land. We know we have trespassed on the home grounds of the Lazuli.

Where is the home? We stand quietly and look around. Three feet away we spy a tawny tuft among the stems of artemesia. It is a deep basket, deeper than a Song Sparrow's, woven of dried grasses, dead leaves, cacoons and strips of bark lined with fine rootlets, fine grasses and horse hair. It is tied to several stems with grass blades two feet from the ground. Four, light.blue, unspotted eggs are in the nest. By this time both birds are flitting nervously about, uttering their alarm notes, but now and then the male bursts into song. Let us leave before we trample down their garden and expose their home.

No bird is more associated in my mind with pleasant times outdoors in charming places than the Lazuli. One of these was in June, 1904, on the San Lorenzo Creek near Santa Cruz, California. The Redwood trees on the slopes of the valley had been cut and burned over a few years before and huckle and dewberries had grown up thickly. While I was picking dewberries one day I actually put my hand into the nest of a Lazuli Bunting which was tucked away among the vines entirely hidden by leaves. There were three eggs almost ready to hatch. If these Buntings ate berries they could have feasted in their doorway. About a week later, I visited the nest again. It was early morning and for quite a while I watched the parents come to the nest about every 10 minutes with food. Sometimes I could see a worm or bug in the beak of one of them. I well remember wondering how the father could sing his gay song with a green caterpillar dangling from his beak. At other times their beaks may have been full of soft seeds. As the little birds grew older they were doubtless fed a larger percent. of seeds until when fully grown their menu would be about two.thirds seeds and one.third insects.

If I ever dream of a bird it will surely be a Lazuli Bunting singing in May. In my experience he has never been common or commonplace. He seems to be saying, "Goodbye, I know a lovelier place this." It may not be complimentary to compare so fine a person as Lazuli with others. But I guess he can stand it. Anyway the male Lazuli reminds one of a small western bluebird. His head and neck are bright and turquoise blue which darkens on back and wings. On his breast he wears a broad chestnut patch as the Bluebird does but it becomes white underneath. Without knowing anything of the rules of art I should say he is made up with proper artistic balance. He is not one solid color or two nor is he spotted up with half a doren. Nature did not spill her paint pot over him as she did his cousin, the Indigo Bunting. She put a white band or two on his dusky wings to break up the monotony of too much blue. Then she gave him all the dash and vivacity that the Bluebird lacks. Lastly she endowed him with the gift of song to match his lively spirits. The Lazuli's happiness is not passive like the Bluebirds, but enthusiastic. During May and June and far into July he does not allow you to forget for an hour that life for him is just what his appearance would tell you—an adventure of delight. Other birds are beautiful, other birds are merry singers but the Lazuli is beauty in song, or if you like, music decked out in colors to harmonize. It is difficult to praise him without writing poetry so I will say it in rhyme:

To the Lazuli Bunting

A perfect poem yourself you are
That words of mine may only mar.
In Spring on seeing you arrive
I think some dream has come alive.
To look at you is to know full well.
What it means to see a singing Jewel
Whoever linked blue with happiness
Had you and your song in mind I guess.
You are all I could ever wish to be
If I could fly away forever free.
The brown earth symbol on my breast
And the azure heaven for my crest,
With happiness and beauty gained
Most other gifts might be disdained.

I would not give the impression that these Buntings are always found near water. When nesting in semi-arid regions they seem to prefer the vicinity of streams or river bottoms but the birds are just as often seen on canyon sides and in chaparrel of the foothills far from water. In my early notes I find descriptions of these nests in dry situations, possibly a mile from water. Two were in sage canyons near San Diego, one in a sage, another in a sumac bush two feet from the ground and the third in a chamiso on a high.burnt.over granite hillside 25 miles from the coast near Lakeside. As with Orioles and many other tropical birds the male Lazuli has all the showy gifts. His song reminds one at times of the Yellow Warble, the Willow Goldfinch and the House Finch. He does not try to hide himself, or his music. But his mate has not given up the old notion that the wife should say little, do much and sit with wonder at the feet of her husband. She is protectively colored gray.brown above, creamy.brown below with the slightest hint of blue here and there. She acts the part of a demure little spouse and usually keeps well hidden in the underbrush. The young Buntings are colored like their mother without the suggestion of blue in their plumage. Lazuli Buntings are found in suitable localities as summer visitants from Kansas to the Pacific Coast and from the southern British Columbia to the southern boundary of the United States. They are seen anywhere in this region during migrations in April and September, but their breeding range roughly coincides with the Upper Sonoran and Transition life zones.

WE'RE FLAG WAVERS

A great American patriot once confessed, "Sure I'm a flag waver! Can you show me a better flag to wave?"

That's how the men who belong to the Veterans of Foreign Wars feel about their country—and we don't care a damn about the wisecracks of the smart alecks.

Being overseas veterans, we're not self-conscious when our patriotism shows. On the contrary, we believe it's high time to teach the youngsters of today there's nothing corny about waving the Stars and Stripes every chance you get.

That's why we are always promoting patriotic programs—the kind that will help our kids understand what a great country America is.

Sure, we're flag wavers, and we're proud of it. And that explains why those who understand the purpose of our flag waving never fail to say—

Do You Want To Cut Your Federal Taxes?

Slash Government Cost

If your personal or business expenses go up and your income and efficiency come down this year at the same rate as that of the Federal Government, you will be in the hands of the sheriff at an early date.

Workers, farmers, and businessmen from Maine to California know this. The answer is in the Report of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government. This twelve-man, bi-partisan Commission was unanimously created by Congress with the approval of the President. At the suggestion of Mr. Truman, former President Hoover was made its Chairman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Vice Chairman. The late president Franklin D. Roosevelt long had advocated such a reorganization of the government.

There is a two-fold purpose behind the effort to reorganize the Executive Branch of the Government: One—the elimination of inefficiency caused by overlapping and duplication; two—this should lead to a reduction of your taxes. If our Government can save from three to four billion dollars a year by more efficient methods of conducting our business, failure to act is stupid short-sightedness.

Action, however, depends upon the President and Congress. The President has already submitted a number of reorganization recommendations. The Congress has adopted several of these, most important having to do with the housekeeping of the armed forces, which save the taxpayer more than $500,000,000 a year. But these are only first steps. There will be more ahead if Congress is made to realize Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer want more tax-saving economies. Congressmen and Senators will vote for just so many of the Commission's recommendation as you, their constituents, demand.

What can you, as an individual, do about it? The answer is to write your Congressman and Senators. Tell them you want the Recommendations of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government made the law of the land. Join the non-partisan Citizens Committee set up to obtain the necessary action to make the Commission's report work. Write to the Citizens Committee for Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government, 1421 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia 2, Pennslyvania, for more information about the Commission Report. Tell your neighbors about it. Make speeches! Make your representatives in Washington act—now!

PEST CONTROL OPERATORS LEARN ABOUT SPRAYS

Chemical sprays can prevent diseases and insect damage to deciduous trees, and at the same time correct nutrient deficiencies, Harold F. Madsen and C. Emlen Scott told pest control operators this week. Farm Advisor, E. C. Moore, said the group gathered for a short course at Davis, preparatory to taking the examination now required for pest control operators in California.

Madsen, specialist in entomology, and Scott, specialist in plant pathology, both of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service told the operators that chemical sprays have many uses these days, both positive and negative. Chemicals can prevent bacterial diseases which damage fruit or foliage, such as fireblight of apples and pears, and walnut blight. They can control fungus diseases such as brown rot blossom blight of apricot, and shot hole of almond, apricot and peach. Certain sprays will control insects such as the codling moth and scale, and the mites which attack so many deciduous fruits. The two specialists presented a general spray program for insects and diseases of deciduous fruit trees in California.

On the positive side, chemical sprays can correct nutrient deficiencies, such as little leaf. In years when the winter is not cold enough, oil sprays applied between January 1 and 20 can result in an earlier and more even bloom. Hormones can prevent heavy losses from premature drop on apples and pears. Chemicals applied at blossom time can reduce the set and save hand thinning.

Moore says growers who may be interested in using chemicals can receive information on spray programs suitable to San Diego County from the Agricultural Extension Service Office, Room 404, U. S. Custom Building, or through the Agricultural Commissioner's Office.

DRY FEED PROTECTS NEW FEED

Dry feed on the ground has been a big help in protecting new feed during the recent cold weather, according to F. W. Dorman, Farm Advisor. The dry feed is not wasted, but is eaten along with the new grass it is protecting.

Dorman states livestock producers should plan to leave some dry feed on the ground each fall. This acts as a reserve feed supply in case of a bad year.

Dry litter on the ground is an excellent way to prevent erosion and get maximum water penetration. Now is the time livestock men can see the benefits of this "feed in the bank" procedure.

GREEN FEED

Don't cut or pasture below the growing point of oats or barley if you want to get the most green feed this spring, states F. W. Dorman, Farm Advisor. Removing the growing point forces the plants to send up new shoots from the crown, delaying regrowth.

Dorman says the growing point can be determined by splitting the stem with a sharp knife. It will be located above the uppermost joint.

If oats or barley are pastured or cut before they are six inches high, there is little danger of removing the growing point at this time of year.

WIN, PLACE AND SHOW IN THE BARLEY FIELD

Club Mariot, Atlas and California Mariout share top honors for popular barley varieties in the state. Farm Advisor Bernarr J. Hall, says a recent barley variety acreage survey, made by the University of California Agricultural Extension Service, shows that 75 percent. of the barley acreage in California consists of these three varieties.

The greatest change in the barley variety picture, according to Loren Davis, agronomy specialist of the Agricultural Extension Service, is the rapid increase in the production of California Mariot. This variety increased from 8.7 percent. of the total barley acreage in 1944 to 21 percent in 7949, at the expense of Club Mariot and Atlas. Atlas shows thegreatest decrease in acreage, dropping from 36 per cent. in 1944 to 25 percent. in 1949. Vaughn has more than tripled in acreaage in the past five years, but is still a minor variety with only seven percent. of the total acreage. Vaughn has given lower yields in San Diego test plots as compared to other commonly grown varieties, says Hall.

Davis says it is hard to tell what the variety acreage trends will be in the next five years. A few wet seasons in some areas may decrease the popularity of California Mariot. Increased demands for malting barley, accompanied by premium prices, would increase the acreage percent. of Atlas. The introduction of some new superior variety would cut into the acreage of present varieties. The promising results with the new Arivat may mean more plantings in that variety, with a decrease in acreage of the other varieties.

The total barley acreage in the state may increase with the expected increase in livestock numbers in California. This will depend somewhat on the popularity of other feed crops such as field corn and milo, Davis says.

Meeting to Study Education Needs

Monday evening, at 7:45, an interesting program dealing with education will be presented in the Grossmont auditorium. The Grossmont Regional Teachers' Institute Committee has been busily engaged for several months in formulating plans to acquaint parents fully with the schools' program and to have them assist in preparing that same program. It is hoped that this meeting will be the first in a series which will open the way for interested parents to assist teachers and administrators in some ways toward the development of school planning.

The committee has secured an outstanding speaker. Dr. John Sexson, who was formerly superintendent of Pasadena City Schools, and is now Executive Secretary of the California Association of School Administrators. He is well acquainted in the ways and means of setting up parent participation in school planning.

Following the main speaker, parents and representatives of each of the seven school districts will be invited to re-assemble in various rooms at the high school for the purpose of holding panel discussions. These panels will attempt to develop still further the points suggested by Dr. Sexson.

Two of the members of the Lemon Grove panel will be Byron L. Netzley, leader, and S. K. Solleder, recorder.

Your school strongly urges the attendance of all parents at this important meeting.

An official board meeting will be held at 9 a.m., Monday at the home of Mrs. Ted Haaf.

Mrs. David Fraser of San Diego will continue her valuable instruction in Ethics at 1:30 p.m., February 13, in the clubhouse. The topic will be "Keynoting the Club Program." Girls of the Lemon Grove Junior High School entertained their fathers at a father-daughter party at Frienship Hall on Friday evening, January 20. The girls were all members of the folk dancing classes of the physical education department. Approximately 150 persons enjoyed the dancing and refreshments. The fathers wore jeans and plaid shirts; the girls all donned bright full skirts and colorful blouses.

Carol Dennstedt of the seventh grade acted as master of ceremonies, presenting a tap dance by Judy Nelson; clarinet duet, Marilyn Bunch and Carol Skarda; a song, "Dear Hearts and Gentle People" by Ava Winkler and Beverly Loper; piano solo by Barbara Balch and Kathy Pendergrass.

The following dances were given by the girls, who have been busily practicing these past weeks, since the holidays, at the Lemon Grove Community Center. Tom McCabe, Ruth Finnerty, Nancy Stevens, Marilyn Bunch, Billy Carmen, Travis Keeton and Rurik Kallis all received checks for their splendid efforts.

Nominees from the junior high spoke briefly to the student body, prior to the election of officers for student council. The ballots were cast immediately upon return to the home rooms. These new officers will serve on the council during the second semester. Mr. Fabian Eagan is faculty sponsor of the group.

Each of the eight home rooms is now electing room representatives to the student council, and they will be announced next week.

Report cards for the second nine weeks period were issued this week by teachers of the school district. This culminates the work of the first semester. Monday was the beginning of the second semester at all schools. In the junior high, new electives were offered students who wished to explore a new field during the seventh period each day. Schools Helps March of Dimes

Many of the rooms have made attractive, appealing posters for the campaign, and others have devoted large bulletin boards to show the progress of the collections. Each student has been given a card which holds five dimes when filled, but many boys and girls are returning these cards with dollar bills conveniently occupying the slot of dimes. This drive is sponsored annually by the Nationaal Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Results of the collection will be announced at a later date.
